THE TWO JEWISH MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

The recent federal elections in Canada have proved satisfactory to the Jewish population in one respect, at any rate—the two Jewish former members have both been re-elected by substantial majorities.

We are by no means believers in the principle that the Jewish electorate should at all times and under all conditions, blindly support the Jewish candidates just because they happen to be Jews. The bearing of a Jewish name, or affiliation with the Jewish race does not entitle one to the Jewish suffrage. Indeed, the tests of qualification should be more stringent in the case of Jewish candidates than in the case of the ordinary non-Jewish candidates.

In Canada the general belief is that the most workable type of parliament is that which consists of two parties, the one forming the government and the other the opposition. Platforms and policies are not considered to be of much importance. The chief requisite of an effective parliament is that there shall be definitiveness of alignment and consistency of allegiance. Where there are more than two parties a certain amount of confusion is supposed to prove inevitable. And the simple political sense of the Canadian abhors confusion and uncertainty. It wants clearness—"Yes" or "No"; "in or out", "Conservative or Liberal." No subtleties; no nuances.

Of course, this point of view is no longer as widespread as it once was. We now see farmers who are not afraid to say that the specific interests of the Canadian agrarian must be properly represented in parliament by distinctively agrarian members. And Labour has become class-conscious to the point where it succeeds in electing several exponents of the labour cult to parliament. Moreover, we find that the farmers of one province—Alberta—insist on having a party of their own and elect a distinctive group of Albertan farmers who are expected to represent the Alberta point of view only. The tabulations of the recent election returns have shown that political grouping is not as simple as it used to be. Whether good or bad, multi-partyism is a phenomenon to be reckoned with.

We do not intend to commit ourselves in favour of either point of view. But we maintain that both of them are consistent with the idea of Jewish representation; indeed, that the idea of Jewish representation forms a part of their very logic.

If we assume that multi-partyism is desirable, then it follows that every specific interest is entitled to representation. The underlying idea of this position is that two parties covering the length and breadth of the whole country cannot do justice to all the shades of opinion that grow out of the diversity of interests throughout the land. Necessarily, then, the distinctive cultural character of the Jewish element is entitled to be heard in the chorus of interests in parliament. An assemblage consisting of spokesmen of all elements of Canadianism would be incomplete without a fair representation of the Jewish element. The point is too clear to require further elaboration.

Assuming, however, with the majority of Canadians, that parliament can be effective only if it consists of no more than two parties, it does not follow that the composition and complexion of

"NOW IT MUST BE TOLD"

By RABBI FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

"I was a member of the Royal Flying Corps, during the war, and I want to bear testimony to what the speaker has asserted. I was one of the men who received orders to drop explosive bombs on defenseless German cities and villages, and I was one of those who did it." These remarks were uttered by a Toronto minister at a meeting of ministers called to hear of the forthcoming peace crusade of Dr. F. W. Norwood, Minister of the City Temple, London, and one of the leading preachers of Great Britain. Dr. Norwood, in his address, had told his audience of the six-months' leave of absence he had secured from his church, that he might go on an extensive tour of Great Britain, and advocate the cause of peace. Dr. Norwood himself had been in the battlefront, and had accompanied Australian troops in an unofficial capacity. He had emerged from the war with an undying hatred for all wars, and with the resolve never again to lend his voice to the recruiting of soldiers, nor ever again to urge men to fight because the Nazarene desired it. Dr. Norwood stated emphatically that he was not a pacifist, and that he would defend his country if invaded. He added, unequivocally, that he would not bear arms for Great Britain, his country, if it went to war without submitting its cause to an impartial international court for arbitration. Wherever he was to go, he was going to persuade the British people to take a pledge never to bear arms for their own country if it refused to submit its grievance against its enemy to arbitration. In his presentation, he made the statement that more poison gases were used by the British than by the Germans, and more tons of lead were dropped on defenseless cities by the British than by the Germans during the Great War, though both of these violations of the international war codewere made first by the Germans. When Dr. Norwood concluded his address, and the meeting was thrown open for discussion, a Toronto minister asked that Dr. Norwood's remarks concerning Great Britain's use of poison gases and bombing of non-combatants be eliminated from any press reports of his address, to protect the name of the Empire. This request did not meet with Dr. Norwood's approval. In reply, he said: "We have too long regarded ourselves as saints and the others as sinners. War brutalizes all who participate in it, and the sooner that is recognized the sooner will we approach a basis for permanent peace. If the gentlemen of the press want to publish what I said about bombing defenseless cities by British aviators, they have my benediction in doing so. I would even make more sensational statements, if I was seeking for sensation."

This answer brought several ministers to their feet. One maintained that he had served as a chaplain during the war, and that he had seen Germans bomb a Red Cross hospital. Another rose and said that he had also served as a chaplain, that he had known many aviators and had flown with them, and had been told by them that they were bombing defenseless German cities and villages. Then another rose and spoke of witnessing a Red Cross ship sunk by a German torpedo. It was then that the statement, initially quoted, of one in the British Army who had hurled explosives on German non-combatants was Telegraphic advice was received by I. Mendelsohn, 318 Notre Dame Street West, that his brother, S. L. Hialeah was right in the path of the hurricane that swept over that part of Florida.

UNVEIL MONUMENT TO OTTO MEARS

Jewish Empire Builder of San Juan Valley Honoured

A chapter in the history of the Rocky Mountain West was indelibly engraved in the San Juan Valley August 29, when the pioneers of southwestern Colorado unveiled a monument, hewn out of solid native granite, to honour Otto Mears, Jewish empire-builder.

In a setting of grandeur along the new Silverton-Ouray million-dollar highway, the monument commemorates Mears' building of the original toll road over which the new highway has been constructed. It also sets forth the achievements of Otto Mears in opening up for travel the entire old Conejos region, embracing the present counties of Rio Grande, Sagauche, Mineral, Hinsdale, Ouray, San Miguel, Dolores, Montezuma and Archuleta.

Mr. Mears did not personally attend the celebration which has just been held in his honour; his present home is Pasadena, Calif., and at eighty two he is not considered robust enough for the trip to the scene of his earlier achievements nor for the excitement attending the honours being accorded him. But from his comfortable Pasadena hotel he has been receiving a running account of the ceremonies of which he has been the central figure. Representing him was his grandson, Otto Mears Pitcher, who will return to California to give his noted grandfather full details of the tribute paid to the name and deeds of Otto Mears.

In a recent interview the veteran pioneer recalled clearly the landmarks of his colorful and eventful life. He was but thirteen years old when he left Russia with his family to embark on a trip half way round the world. When the lad landed in San Francisco in 1857, the excitement of the gold rush was quieting down. But there loomed in its place the dark prospect of southern rebellion. Less than four years after landing in his new country, Otto joined the Union colors.

His first war experience was a long and dreary trek to New Mexico. Battles with the Indian, and a thrilling period of service under the intrepid Kit Carson—even under such conditions the youth was able to sense the great future of the vast Southwest. A bullet in his leg and a sabre wound across his cheek brought an end to his war career. He started his life anew in Santa Fe, N.M.

He became associated with the general merchandise house of Stabb Brothers; after a few years he was able to buy them out. In 1866 he moved his stock to Conejos, Colorado, and there began his career as "Pathfinder of the San Juan." In partnership with Major Head, Mears erected the first saw mill in southern Colorado, a flour mill and a grist mill. This was the first ascent from the primitive life of the Mexican farmers in the Southwest.

It was as the builder of roadways that Otto Mears achieved fame. Out of Conejos, in every direction, he blazed trails. He built 383 miles of toll roads; he projected long stretches of branch railways, connecting the southwestern empire with the newly extended transcontinental lines; he opened up southwestern Colorado to settlement, ranching and trade. To find buyers for the grain of the newly settled region, he tied up the San Luis Valley with the Arkansas River. He built a road across Poncha Pass, and at Governor Gilpin's suggestion made it a toll road starting a method for attracting road-builders which served until the State and Federal governments could take up the burden of opening up highway travel. By the time the silver rush to the San Luis Valley came, the soldiers of fortune had a network of Mears' toll roads over which to reach the new Eldorado.

Mears' ride to Denver as member-elect to the State Legislature in 1884 was the inspiration for an ambitious programme of rail building. Mears projected the railroad from Silverton to Red Mountain; this he followed with the Rio Grande Southern, connecting Denver by rail with Telluride and Durango. Along the Mears roads new towns sprang up; mining communities grew overnight. Ore was carried in a continuous stream to the smelters.

The leading southwestern towns of Gunnison, Montrose, Ouray, Silverton, Ridgeway, Telluride—these are but a few that owe their rise to the empire-builder whose name is on every lip in San Juan country to-day.

Love for Otto Mears is a tradition in this part of Colorado. Fifty years ago he was the peacemaker between the Indians and whites, who equally revered him. In the Senate Chamber his portrait is included in the Gallery of Famous Citizens of this State. To-day, while he is still alive, the region to which he gave his best days and efforts is telling him that it remembers him as one of its great and most useful citizens.—Jewish News, Denver, Colo.

REGIONAL RABBI ASSUMES NEW DUTIES

Rabbi Babel Benedict Glazer has just assumed his new duties as regional rabbi for the state of Pennsylvania, and from headquarters in Pittsburgh, under the auspices of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, will endeavour to organize the religious life of thousands of Jews who are unaffiliated with any congregation. Rabbi Glazer is the first regional rabbi to be appointed in the United States. His headquarters will be at Temple Rodeph Shalom, Fifth and Norwood Avenues. He will tour the State, visiting small and large cities, universities, hospitals and penal institutions, to assist in organizing congregations for religious worship and schools for the instruction of Jewish young people. It is estimated that there are nearly one hundred small communities in Pennsylvania which have groups of Jews in need of assistance in religious organization.

The appointment of Rabbi Glazer was made by the department of Synagogue and School Extension of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. The Union is a national body whose members are nearly 300 Reform congregations throughout the United States. The organization aims to develop and sustain Reform Judaism in this country. This it does through the Hebrew Union College at Cincinnati which trains rabbis for the Jewish pulpit and teachers for Jewish religious schools, and by the Department of Synagogue and School Extension which endeavours to bring opportunities for the worship of Judaism to every Jew everywhere. It helps to organize synagogues and schools, and publishes literature and distributes tracts which are sent to the remotest farms and hamlets, as well as to congested cities. The appointment of the regional rabbi for Pennsylvania marks the first Jewish state-wide religious movement undertaken by this organization.

Rabbi Glazer is a graduate of the Hebrew Union College. Born in Dallas, Texas, he received his high school and elementary school education in Montreal, and secured his B.A. and M.A. from the University of Cincinnati. While at the University he did Juvenile Court and Americanization work in Cincinnati. He has officiated as rabbi in Springfield, Mo., Danville, Ill., Lynbrook, L.I., and Newport, Ky. Last summer he was appointed by the [illegible] partment of Synagogue and Schoo[illegible] tension of the Union to organize summ[illegible] religious services at resorts in New Yo[illegible] New Jersey and the New England state[illegible]

The Jewish Athlete During the Past Year

BY HARRY CONZEL

TENNIS

It is not exaggerating to predict a Jewish period in American tennis in the near future. A number of very promising junior players have recently come to the fore, and tennis authorities see the future senior champions in these youngsters. Among the most eminent of these we would mention Julius Seligson, of New York; Eddie Jacobs, of Baltimore; Sandy Wiener, of Philadelphia; Phil Milstein, of Denver; and Morton Bernstein, of New York. There are, of course, a greater number of youngsters in various parts of this country. Kurt Bergman, one of the ranking players of Germany, will undoubtedly play a big part in international tennis competitions as soon as Germany is permitted to take part in such tournaments.

COLLEGIATE ATHLETICS

Unless one were a calculating machine, one could never keep a complete survey of the Jewish share in collegiate athletics. Names are often misleading; and as the Jewish university athletes don't all register as Jews, we will content ourselves with mentioning only the foremost Jewish stars.

Harvard has the most impressive galaxy of stars. First honours go to Al Miller, football player extraordinary and most brilliant sprinter of the Eastern universities. His greatest triumphs during the past year were the 100- and 200-yard dash in the Harvard-Yale meet. Harvard also boasts Izzy Zarakov, a three-letter man whose achievements in football, baseball and hockey are inscribed in golden letters in the book of Harvard athletics. Izzy has been elected captain of Harvard's baseball team for next year. Hi Gans, soccer player, John Davidson, fencing champion, and Benny Goldberg, wrestling star, must also be mentioned. The appointment of Arnold Horween, former Jewish all-American football player, as Harvard's football coach is another milestone in the success of Jewish athletes.

Benny Friedman, quarterback of Michigan University, has been acclaimed the greatest football player in America, second only to Red Grange. Cornell's left halfback, Gassner, fullback Charlie Levy of Washington University, and Rosenberg of Cornell are other Jewish football stars who have made their mark in collegiate athletics during the past year.

In collegiate wrestling, C. Miller of Yale and Mike Sesit of Columbia (the latter is also a remarkable football player) have done so splendidly that they have been elected captains of their respective varsity teams. Pinkie Sober, junior half-mile champion, just graduated from New York City College, is looked upon as the future American senior champion of that distance. Sober has established a new junior American record for the half-mile. We can also mention J. Yank Sachs, captain of the basketball team of Jews in this country are paying the price for giving the Jewish youth little or nothing in the way of Jewish education and the great cry to-day among rabbinical and lay readers, both Orthodox and Reform, is Jewish education. If these leaders meet on no other common ground, they are forced together now upon the ground of Jewish education when they ponder the results of the lack of it. The present generation is indifferent to Judaism, not because it is irreligious any more than because it is ignorant of Judaism, untaught in it. The sight of this generation, which should have been educated Jewishly more than twenty years ago, is plenty of inspiration to those in favour of Jewish education. Twenty years ago the present-day agitation for Jewish education should have attained the height aimed for now. But there was no foresight, no building done for the future, so lay and rabbinical leaders, appalled at the price of negligence, are pushing their hands out against a bad condition.

Concerning the present system of Jewish schools, Dr. Leo Jung, head of the Jewish Centre of New York, said at last year's convention of the Union of Orthodox Congregations: "Even now the majority of religious schools are housed in cellars or basements with a minimum of light and fresh air. They are dusty, malodorous and utterly unattractive. How often have we found that the teacher's chief qualification for teaching, for moulding the mind and character of our youth, lay in the fact that he was unfit for any other occupation or profession?" This picture, said Dr. Jung, is what comes to the mind of young men and women when Hebrew school is mentioned. It portrays the cheapest, the least that can be done by the elders in the way of Jewish education for the children. It is most inconsistent with Jewish parental anxiety for the education of the young.

One price which the Jewish community of America is paying for its negligence and its shoddy investment in means of education is the Jewish criminal and gangster. The gangster is usually in the late twenties. When he was little his spiritual and moral education was neglected.

Thousands upon thousands of his kind lived on the streets and ran in packs, growing up to be good-for-nothings. The recent persistent appearance in cities of the Jewish gangster, criminal, hold-up man and the increase in numbers of his kind is a sore on the Jewish community body. Crime among Jews is more of a disaster than crime among other groups. The community at large overestimates it, wants to know the reason, charges it up to all Jews. Of the moral degeneration of part of the Jewish youth, a writer in the Yiddish paper, "The Day," says: "The most important cause of the fact that so many of our young men go astray seems to be their estrangement and side-stepping from the Jewish manner of living and from Jewish culture. When the yoke of tradition is entirely thrown off with a single stroke, when one permits children to grow up without any home influence and outside the spiritual environment of their own people, one may expect that a part of those neglected and abandoned should not find in themselves the moral and spiritual power necessary to resist all temptations."

Belatedly, sluggishly, the Jews are building up a modern Jewish school system. It is inevitable that a new cultural apparatus will be established in this decade to repair the weakening of Jewish strength, to build up against another such break-down as this generation displays. Part of the system will be such schools as the new Talmud Torah of Toronto, a modern one where children are given instruction by modern methods in healthful surroundings. In the Talmud Torah is one means by which the Jewish child may be assisted morally and spiritually, a means by which his attachment to the ideals of his people may be secured, by which his loyalty to Judaism may be safeguarded, a means by which chances for delinquency are lessened. A system for Jewish education can do what neither the synagogue nor the home nor both together as they are now can do. Neither the home nor the synagogue generates the spiritual force it used to. Both are invaded by the influences of materialism and indifference to spirituality.

The Jews of Toronto should help each other with the Talmud Torah here. The community is small enough to expect groups to co-operate in worth-while undertakings. The Talmud Torah is not the property of just one side of town and should flourish through reciprocity between group and group. Its existence has something to do with the future of Judaism and the men who want to see it succeed financially have the right to expect assistance of any man who calls himself a Jew. f.f.c

HENRY FORD AND THE RUSSIAN MONARCHISTS

It is reported in connection with the trial which is now taking place in Moscow of Drushelovsky, who is charged with having fabricated a number of documents, including the Zinoviev letter, that Drushelovsky has made a statement that when he was under arrest last year in Berlin he was visited in prison by Mr. Brazol, one of the leaders of the antisemitic Russian emigrants in the United States. Brazol was in touch with Mr. Henry Ford, whom he translated into English the "Protocols of the Elders of Zion." Drushelovsky declares that Brazol came to him on behalf of Ford to ask him to provide a number of documents which would clear the Russian Monarchists of the charge made against them that they were guilty of the pogroms on the Jewish population in Russia. Drushelovsky promised to do that and asserts now that the documents tending to show their guilt were manufactured by the Communist International. The documents were to be brought forward at a trial against the Communist International which was to be instigated in this country at the instance of Henry Ford. Drushelovsky also supplied Brazol with a number of statements by witnesses which cleared the Monarchists of the pogrom charges. The documents were duly certified by a notary in Berlin. It was further arranged that Drushelovsky should go to America, at the expense of Mr. Ford, in order to give evidence as a witness at the trial.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, mineral, water power, fish, game and scenery, are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

Two Jewish Members of Parliament

the two respective parties must be monotonously uniform.

The supposition is that in the main issues affecting the country as a whole it is possible to subsume the various reactions of individuals and groups under two main attitudes, the two major political parties representing the respective attitudes. Within the parties, however, it is desirable to have as many groups and points of view as possible. Indeed, without these the parties would be colorless and moribund. The Conservative party and the Liberal party each claims to be national, appealing to all geographical sections and to all creeds and races within the confines of the country. The more diversified their composition the more vital the parties are.

Now within the parties, functioning as national groups, it is essential that the attitude of component groups shall be faithfully represented. For example, it is necessary that in the councils of the Conservative or Liberal party, the true points of view of the Maritimes, of the Catholics, of the Orangemen, of Labour, of the Alberta Farmers, etc., be all accurately and truly spoken for. The parties can be healthy and national only if they reflect the needs and attitudes of all types of Canadians.

It follows therefore that under the bi-party system adequate Jewish representation is not only desirable from the Jewish standpoint but equally as much from the standpoint of the Canadian interests. The Jews play a not insignificant part in Canadian life. It is important that the Canadian Government and the Canadian parties understand what Canadian Jews are and stand for in Canada.

The crux of the situation is that the Jewish representation shall be truly representative of the Jewish point of view. For this reason we said at the beginning that we do not believe in supporting Jewish candidates just because they are Jews in name, and that the tests of qualification for Jewish candidates should be more stringent than in the case of non-Jews.

Jewish candidates can be of value to the Jewish people and to Canada, if they can act as interpreters of Jewry to the people at large. We want Canada to be a happy land where the different peoples understand each other and achieve a harmony based on understanding. Jews who do not understand and are not in sympathy with Jewish life cannot be of much service either to the Jewish people or to the country as a whole.

S. W. Jacobs is a Liberal and perhaps valuable to his party. But he has proved himself a good Jew and parliament is richer because of his presence and readiness to expound the Jewish point of view. A. Heaps is a Labour man, but he has also shown himself to be well acquainted with Jewish problems and prepared to stand up as a Jew.

A good Jew is a better Canadian for being a good Jew. A good Jewish member of parliament is a better servant of Canada for being loyal to the Jewish view of life.

Rabbi Isserman's Editorial

made, to bolster up the position and statement of Dr. Norwood. The Toronto Press reprinted the discussion. Cables were sent to London and, of course, the statements were exaggerated.

I am in hearty accord with the statement of Dr. Norwood that we have too long regarded ourselves as saints and the Germans as fiends. The influence of the tons of propaganda which were poured through the press to stimulate the war morale of the allied masses had not yet abated. Too many still regard the Germans as kinsmen of the devil. I hold no brief for the Germans. But war is brutal, and fiendish and diabolical. Men are out to kill their fellow men, and no nation that embarks in war can keep its escutcheon clean, for war is a dirty business. While Germany initiated certain brutalities, the allied nations, as the evidence of this meeting showed, followed her example. Should this news be told and spread broadcast, or should it, like the family skeleton, be hidden in a dark closet? Is it patriotic to mention one's country's sins? Does patriotism mean blinding oneself to one's country's vices? There is a blind type of patriotism, or rather chauvinism, which says, in the boastful spirit of the warrior, "My country right or wrong, my country." There is another type of patriotism, a nobler type, which says, "My country, right; keep her right. My country wrong, to set her right." The patriot imbued with this spirit is no less loyal to his country than the other. He loves his country, not in a blind partisan way, but with a noble and ideal love. He loves his country so much that he would rather see it weak and right than strong and wrong. He would rather see his country defeated than iniquitous, victimized than oppressing. He has regard for his country and its spiritual honour. This type of British patriot will not rail against Dr. Norwood for making the statements he did about the war. They will hurt him, but they will arouse in him the determination to keep his country out of struggles which compel her to commit acts of brutality, acts which she later hesitates to broadcast. By all means let us hear all about the war, all the filth it generated, British as well as German, how it degrades human beings. Let us see war in all its ugly nudity, stripped of the glamour of uniforms and medals. Let us see how it brings men to the level of animals, how it destroys their noble impulses, aye, how with one fell swoop it sets and sullies, if not extinguishes, their souls. Let us have no illusions about it. War is Hell! Speak all you want, Dr. Norwood. Describe the craziness and ugliness of it; Perhaps you will induce men to outlaw it. As for us let us remember that no nation of saints ever waged war.

MIZRACHI WORLD CONFERENCE

Many notable figures in the religious life of world Jewry gathered in Antwerp on the occasion of the Mizrachi World Conference which was held there recently. Among the prominent persons present were the Chief Rabbi, Dr. J. H. Hertz, Senator Rabbi Rubinstein, of Vilna; Rabbi Meir Berlin, Dr. B. Drachman, of New York; Dr. M. Hoffman, of Frankfort; Rabbi Nurok, of Riga, and Mr. Herman Struck, of Palestine. Mr. M. Ussischkin delivered the opening address in which he analyzed the present situation in Palestine. Considerable criticism was voiced against the unfriendly attitude of the Zionist organization toward the Mizrachi activities. Among the resolutions adopted there was one recommending that further steps be taken towards establishing a peaceful understanding between the Mizrachi and the Agudas Israel organization. A budget for the year of $155,000 was adopted and the following were elected members of the Executive: Rabbis Meir Berlin, Fischman, Landau and Deputy Dr. Feldman.

WARSAW SCHOOLS CLOSED ON ACCOUNT OF EPIDEMICS

Serious epidemics have infested the Warsaw community, which led to the order that all schools be closed. All the Talmud Torahs and private Hadarim have been closed and the Jews have shown a most praiseworthy attitude in their assistance to the government in introducing hygienic measures to prevent the spread of the disease. Scarlet fever is the most predominant, although other children's diseases have been in progress. All public schools will not be opened until September 15, but if the epidemic does not subside the opening of the schools will be postponed still further. The government comissar for Warsaw, General Skladowski, called upon Rabbi Perlman and expressed to him the gratitude of the government for the initiative that the Jewish population has taken in supporting the fight against the epidemic.

LLOYD GEORGE AND JEWISH RACE

In a letter apologizing for his absence from a luncheon given by the Interversity Jewish Federation Summer School at Bangor August 23, the Right Hon. David Lloyd George stated:

"Nothing would have been more agreeable to me than to attend a gathering of the famous people whose noble literature constitutes the chief guide and inspiration of the people to whom I belong. I am proud to think that throughout my life I have been an ardent defender of your great people against all their critics and revilers. There is no part of my public life that gives me more satisfaction than that which, as Prime Minister, I took in the framing of the declaration which established the right of the Jewish race to a national home in the land to which their ancestors gave such immortal glory."

Confidence--the Keynote of Success

The knowledge that one is properly dressed creates that confidence which characterizes a successful man.

Collars that feel like a caress. The Van-Dusen and semi-soft made to rival the best starched collar.

Shirts that fit correctly. No bulging at neck or bosom. Cuffs turned evenly, and when necessary taken off and reversed.

Socks and Woollens with that soft, velvety feeling so much desired and only possible when a soap like "Ivory" is used.

Repairs—Every article the man wears kept in first-class condition, not merely "mending free."

About Jewish Boys' Camp

By DR. JACOB MARKOWITZ

An effort is being made to raise $5,000 by subscription for the Bnai Brith Camp for boys, for the erection of a mess pavilion and a number of huts. In spite of the great dearth of funds, the work at the camp, supervised by Mr. M. M. Cohen and the mentors, represents a very fine piece of social service work. It took care of three types of cases: 1. Healthy boys whose parents were unable to send them for a holiday in the country. These were given an outing of several weeks at the camp. 2. Children who were undernourished, or below par from such conditions as heart trouble, and chronic tonsilitis. These were kept for longer periods, in some cases for a whole season. The improvement brought about in some of these youngsters was truly remarkable. 3. Delinquents, who were referred to the camp by officers of the Big Brother Movement. These boys always constituted a distinct minority, so that morally their influence on the rest of the boys was imperceptible. In nearly all cases the child was vastly improved by associating with boys of the normal moral tone. The acquisition of the group spirit by these children is highly desirable, if one is going to eradicate their anti-social proclivities.

To prevent sickness and delinquency is obviously desirable in any community. However, for the Jewish community, the Bnai Brith camp is performing a doubly valuable service, in that it proclaims itself as a Jewish camp, which inculcates the best features of Judaism into the boys. It is thus an improvement on other fresh air camps to which indigent Jewish children may have access.

The camp in the past has been badly hampered by lack of funds. A bad storm blew down and hopelessly damaged the mess-tent; and the tents which housed the boys this season have outlived their usefulness. They were not rain-proof, and the absence of wooden floors made them very uncomfortable in wet weather. In spite of these inconveniences the boys made the best of it and had a wonderful time—at the cost, however, of an enormous amount of work on the part of the leaders. The subscription is worthy of the backing of the entire Jewish community.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Brodey have established a memorial fund of $1,000 in the Toronto G'Milath Chasodim Association (Hebrew Free Loan), in memory of their daughter, Lillian (Mrs. Morris Greisman), who died February 20, 1919. In advising the Association, Mr. Brodey wrote:—

"Having some personal knowledge of the splendid work of your Association and a high regard for the gentlemen who direct its affairs, we are quite confident that this fund will be so administered as to give many needy ones assistance in their endeavours to earn a livelihood for themselves and families. It is our hope that this fund will be supplemented by many others in the near future so that your extraordinary work may be broadened in its scope."

The Jewish Athlete

Clark University, and its outstanding soccer player; Shan Klein, football player of Ohio State University; Dave Lipsky, 440-yard freshman champion of Penn State; Bennie Borris, Toronto University, Canada, collegiate hockey star; Tubby Raskin, three-letter man of New York City College; Abe Silverstein, middle-distance swimming champion of America.

The names mentioned under this heading should undoubtedly also include Levinson, Colgate, Goldstein, Florida; Levy, Tulane, Skudin, New York University; and Parker, Dartmouth; all of gridiron fame.

Women Athletes

It did not require the phenomenal achievement of Gertrude Ederle in swimming across the Channel to focus attention on the amazing headway which women athletes have made in the immediate past. We shall limit ourselves to the mere listing of the most prominent women athletes: Mae Zittman, Pittsburgh, outstanding sprinter, basketball thrower and shot-putter; Rosa M. Grosse, Toronto, 100-yard runner, and most probably the fastest woman on this continent, holding the world-record for this distance for her sex; Fanny Rosenfeldt, Toronto, another great sprinter; Rose Boczeck, fancy diver. Among the golfers we must mention Mrs. Harry Grossman, Mrs. Ed. Goldberger and Mrs. Elaine Rosenthal. We know that these three do not exhaust the list of women golfers in this country, but they are the only ones on whom we have data.

The greatest event in the world of feminine athletics most probably is the retirement of Suzanne Lenglen, the Jewish tennis queen, from amateur competition. While speaking of Europe we should also record the names of the three Jewish swimming champions, Fraulein Heddi Bienenfeld, Fraulein Loewi, of the Vienna Hakoah, and Mlle. Sion of Paris.

Golf

Jews are coming to the fore quickly in golf. Louis Levinson, the eighteen-year-old wizard of San Antonio is a good illustration. Among the veterans we can note only Joe and Ben E. Stein among recognized tournament golfers.

Billiards, Bicycle, Automobile, Wrestling

The only Jewish top-notcher in the billiard game is Henry Solomon, three-cushion billiard champion of the West. In professional bicycle sport Sammy Gastman is our lone representative of any consequence. Louis Fink, outstanding in the automobile racing field, killed on the track only recently, leaves Dave Lewis practically the only Jewish automobile racer of note. Ave Kaplan and Fred Meyers, wrestlers, did not fare any too well last season, and are not considered strong enough for first-class competition.

Basketball, Chess, Professional Football

It would be useless to list Jewish basketball players. Collegiate and professional basketball teams all over the country contain almost a majority of Jews. Nat Holman, of New York, is considered the outstanding Jewish basketball player of this country. The Jewish predominance in the chess world is gradually weakening. Emanuel Lasker, still on the top of his game, is our only chess master who can be relied upon to finish among the first three in any tournament. Reti, Rubinstein and other international Jewish masters have been consistently beaten during the last year. In America, however, Kuptchick proved his calibre by beating Marshall several times, and therefore looms as the next chess champion of America.

No sport review would be complete if it failed to include Joe and John Alexander (not related to each other), former collegiate football stars. Taking advantage of the great boom which professional football now enjoys in America, they will henceforth devote all their time to it as members of the strong professional football team, the New York Giants.

The death of Sigmund Breitbart, the world's strongest Jew, made a deep impression on all those who saw this modern Samson perform and who knew his life and character. A sixteen-year-old New York boy, Harry Luft, has amazed medical authorities with his feats of strength, very similar to Breitbart's, as whose successor he is now being hailed.

It is, of course, impossible within the limits of a magazine article, to give a complete survey of Jewish achievements in the professional and amateur athletic field. This review merely attempts to indicate in a necessarily sketchy manner the continually growing share of the Jews in the field of sports. At the last moment, even, it occurs to us that we have left out the pole vault champion of Hungary, Karlowitz, and the distance-runner of Finland, Katz. Doubtless there are others of distinction who will be missed. It is, however, a great tribute to Jewish sportdom that a reviewer must plead indulgence due to the immensity of the field.
